the Athlete

Coined in 1912 when King Gustav V of Sweden told Jim Thorpe, "You, sir, are the World's Greatest Athlete" after winning the decathlon, the title endures to this day as an honor to the one who wins the World and/or Olympic decathlon. Already the Silver medalist in 2004, Bryan Clay earned the title in 2005 as the World Champion and again in 2008 as the Olympic Champion.

Now among the very few decathletes to hold two Olympic medals he has set his eyes on a third. London 2012 puts Bryan within reach of setting Olympic history by becoming the only decathlete to win three Olympic medals.

the Public Speaker

Bryan is a very grounded person and a great public speaker and motivator. With his relaxed demeanor and eloquent style he has spoken in front of groups both large and small. Whether it is a one-on-one interview for television or a motivational speech to thousands of corporate employees, Bryan has an inspiring message and motivational style.

the Philanthropist

A bit of a rebellious teen often finding himself in trouble, Bryan credits two things with getting his life back on track: His success in sports that led him to college, and his belief and acceptance of the Christian faith. Bryan Clay is going to make a difference in the world and inspire many people.

He has established the Bryan Clay Foundation, that maintains the motto: "Building Champions, Changing Lives". The mission of the foundation is to provide support to students in need by helping them with academic and athletic scholarships, and entrusting high school physical education departments with equipment and improved facilities.

His personal goal for his foundation is quite simple: Provide a platform for success to youths that otherwise would not have the opportunity. Through his foundation, Bryan is able to provide a number of free sports camps for kids in Hawaii as well.

the Family Man

Bryan's father is African-American, his mother is Japanese and he grew up in Honolulu, Hawaii. He graduated from Azusa Pacific University (APU), a private Christian school in Southern California where he met his wife, Sarah Smith and they now have three children.

Bryan is a true Hawaiian in every sense. Very laid back and fun loving with a great sense of humor.

In his home state of Hawaii, Bryan is a household name and one of the most recognizable athlete celebrities. After the Olympics Bryan was deemed "Hawaii's Hero" by the media.
